Poole Harbour 2 by Sean Curley

The business of art

How does a Poole artist sell 3,000 paintings in little more than a decade?

With the help of some good galleries, according to Poole-based oil painter Sean Curley, whose subjects include Poole Harbour and Sandbanks.

His extraordinary achievement is down to a combination of skill and a little luck. 'I produced four paintings for a Bournemouth gallery,' he recalls. 'Christian Hunter Simmonds of the Hunter Simmonds Gallery in Bournemouth liked them so much that he bought all four.

Then over a three year period he proceeded to buy hundreds more from me.'

Earlier this year Sean was the Artist of the Month at Beaulieu Fine Arts and his work is exhibited at countless galleries throughout the UK.

Locally his paintings can be seen at the Quarr Gallery in Swanage - where regular visitors include the Prime Minister of Hungary - and Lavish Life, a new gallery in Westbourne, Bournemouth, 'which is a very nice gallery', according to Sean, a member of creativecoverage.co.uk
